

NOUNS AND ARTICLES

WORDS WITH DIFFERENT MEANINGS IN MASCULINE AND FEMININE FORMS

The following pairs of words have different meanings for masculine and feminine forms.

Masculine		Feminine l'aide	helper	l'aide	help
le critique	critic	la critique	criticism
le guide	guide	la guide	reins (of a horse)
le livre	book	la livre	pound
le manche	handle	la manche	sleeve
le mode	method, mode	la mode	fashion l'office	office, duty	l'office	pantry
le pendule	pendulum	la pendule	clock
le poêle	stove	la poêle	frying pan
le poste	job	la poste	post office
le somme	nap	la somme	sum
le tour	turn, walk around	la tour	tower
le vase	vase	la vase	mud
le voile	veil	la voile	sail

SPECIAL USES OF THE DEFINITE ARTICLE

With General or Abstract Nouns

Unlike English usage, in French the definite article must be used with all abstract nouns nouns used in a general sense. Compare the French and English in the following examples.

L'homme est mortel. Man is mortal.

Il aime les bananes. He likes bananas.

La biologie est une science. Biology is a science.

L'amour est divin. Love is divine.

Les cigarettes ne sont pas bonnes pour la santé.

Cigarettes are not good for the health.

NOUNS AND ARTICLES

With Titles

When talking about someone, the definite article must be used with titles. however, in direct address. The article is omitted,

Le docteur Martin est dentiste. Doctor Martin is a dentist.

But:

Bonjour, docteur Martin. Hello, Doctor Martin.

Le général Pierron est arrivé. General Pierron has arrived.

But:

Comment allez-vous, général Pierron? How are you, General Pierron?

The article is never used with monsieur, madame and mademoiselle.

Monsieur Le Blanc vient. Mister Le Blanc is coming.

Comment allez-vous, Madame Le Blanc? How are you, Mrs. Le Blanc?

In formal address, the article is used before the title.

Bonjour, madame la présidente.

With Days of the Week, Seasons and Dates

The definite article is used with days of the weeks to indicate habitual occurrence. The definite article has the meaning of every or on. The definite article accompanying the days of the week is masculine.

J'ai ma classe de français le lundi.

*I have my French class on Mondays (every Monday). Le dimanche, je ne travaille pas.
On Sunday(s) I don't work.*

The definite article is omitted when talking about a particular day.

Je suis allé au cinéma lundi.

I went to the movies (on) Monday.

Je viendrai vous voir samedi.

I will come to see you (on) Saturday.

Dimanche est le dernier jour de la semaine.

Sunday is the last day of the week.

The definite article is used with seasons when discussing the season in a general sense.

L'été est une saison agréable. Summer is a nice season.

L'hiver est une saison froide. Winter is a cold season.

But:

Je vais à la plage en été.

I go to the beach in summer. Je fais du ski en hiver.

I ski in winter. les robes d'hiver winter dresses

The definite article is used with dates.

Le 15 septembre, les classes recommencent.

On the 15th of September (September IS) classes resume.

Il sera ici le 10 août.

He will be here on the IOth of August (August 10).

With Names of Continents, Countries, Provinces, Regions, Islands, Mountains and Rivers

The definite article is used with names of continents, countries, provinces, regions, islands, mountains and rivers.

La France West pas un grand pays. France is not a large country.

La Bretagne est pittoresque. Brittany is picturesque.

L'Amérique du Nord est un vaste continent. North America is a vast continent.

La Corse est une île méditerranéenne. Corsica is a Mediterranean island.

Les Pyrénées sont entre la France et l'Espagne. The Pyrenees are between France and Spain.

But:

Je vais en France.

I am going to France.

l'histoire de France the history of France

With Weights and Measures

The definite article is used with expressions of quantity when used in conjunction with a price to indicate per.

Les tomates coûtent deux francs le kilo.

Tomatoes cost two francs a (per) kilogram.

Les oeufs coûtent quatre francs la douzaine. Eggs cost four francs a dozen.

With Parts of the Body or Clothing

The definite article is used instead of the possessive adjective with parts of the body or clothing, in order to avoid ambiguity.

Il se lave les mains. He washes his hands.

Il s'en va les mains dans les poches.

He goes away with his hands in his pockets.

The definite article contracts with à (to, at) and de (from, about, of) in the following way:

à + le = au

à + les = aux

à + la do not contract

à + l' do not contract

Je vais au musée.

Je parle aux garçons.

Je parle aux élèves.

Je vais à la pharmacie.

Je parle à l'étudiant.

J'arrive à l'hôpital.

de + le = du de + les = des

de + la do not contract

de + l' do not contract

Je parle du garçon.

Je parle des garçons.

Je parle des étudiants.

Je parle de la fille.

Je parle de l'élève.

OMISSION OF THE INDEFINITE ARTICLE

After the Verb être

Unlike English, the indefinite article is omitted after the verb être (to be) when the verb is followed by an unmodified noun indicating nationality, religion or profession.

Elle est médecin. She is a doctor.

Il est catholique. He is a Catholic.

Elle est canadienne. She is a Canadian.

When c'est is used instead of il est, the indefinite article is used.

C'est un Français. He is a Frenchman. C'est un avocat. He's a lawyer.

The indefinite article is also used when the noun that follows the verb être is modified.

Victor Hugo est un auteur célèbre. Victor Hugo is a famous author.

Victor Hugo est un auteur que tous les Français connaissent.

Victor Hugo is an author whom all Frenchmen know.

The indefinite article is not used:

1. after quel (What a).

Quelle belle vue! What a beautiful view!

2. before nouns in apposition.

Paris, capitale de la France, est une grande ville. Paris, the capital of France, is a big city.

3. after a noun that is a complement of another noun.

une robe de soie a silk dress

un professeur d'histoire a history professor

4. after the preposition sans.

Il travaille sans argent. He works without money.

5. after avec when used with abstract nouns.

Travaillez avec soin. Work with care.

But:

Travaillez avec des amis. Work with some friends.

after ni ... ni.

Il n'a ni argent ni pain.

He has neither money nor bread.

THE PARTITIVE

In English we use the words some or any or no article with nouns that cannot be counted, such as milk, coffee and tea. In French the partitive is used with these nouns and the partitive article cannot be omitted. The partitive is expressed by de plus the definite article. Note that de plus le = du and de plus les = des. The partitive articles are:

	Singular	Plural
Feminine	de la	des
Masculine	du	des
Masculine or feminine before a vowel	de l'	des

Study the following:

J'ai de la soupe. I have some soup.

Elle veut du sucre. She wants some sugar.

Il boit de l'eau. He is drinking (some) water.

Voulez-vous des oranges? Do you want any oranges?

Nous avons des livres. We have some books.

THE PARTITIVE VERSUS THE DEFINITE AND INDEFINITE ARTICLES

The definite article is used with nouns in a general sense. The partitive is used with an undetermined quantity of a noncountable item.

Il aime le café. (all coffee) He likes coffee.

Il boit du café. (some coffee) He drinks (some) coffee.

With nouns that can be counted, such as bananas (one banana), or items used in the plural (some bananas), the indefinite article is used.

Je voudrais une poire.

Je voudrais acheter des tomates et des bananes.

Certain nouns can be count or noncount nouns depending on the way in which they are used. The definite, indefinite or partitive article can be used depending on the meaning.

Voici le gâteau. Here is the cake. (the cake I bought yesterday)

Voici un gâteau. Here is a cake. (a whole cake).

Voici du gâteau. Here is some cake. (part of the cake, a piece of cake)

EXCEPTIONS TO THE RULE FOR USING THE PARTITIVE

When the Sentence Is Negative

Normally, in negative sentences, the partitive article is replaced by de. Note that de becomes d' before a word beginning with a vowel. Study the following.

Affirmative

J'ai du pain.

I have some bread.

J'ai une robe.

I have a dress.

J'ai des livres.

I have some books.

J'ai des amies.

I have some friends.

Negative

Je n'ai pas de pain.

I don't have any bread.

Je n'ai pas de robe.

I don't have a dress.

Je n'ai pas de livres.

I don't have any books.

Je n'ai pas d'amies.

I have no friends.

If the sentence implies an affirmative idea or if you want to emphasize the noun, you may use the partitive forms in negative sentences.

N'avez-vous pas de la famille ici? Don't you have any family here?

Je n'ai pas du respect pour lui, mais du mépris. I don't have any respect for him, rather scorn.

When an Adjective Precedes a Noun in the Plural

When an adjective precedes a noun in the plural, the partitive becomes de.

Singular

J'ai un bon livre.

But:

J'ai un livre intéressant.

Plural

J'ai de bons livres.

J'ai des livres intéressants.

When an adjective is an integral part of the idea, the partitive is used.

des jeunes filles

girls

des jeunes gens

young people

des petits pains

rolls

des petits pois

peas

After Expressions of Quantity and Expressions with de

The partitive becomes de after expressions of quantity such as the following:

assez	enough	une boîte	a box
beaucoup	a lot	une bouteille	a bottle
peu	a little	un verre	a glass
trop	too much	une tasse	a cup
tant	so many	un kilo	a kilogram autant	as much	un litre	a liter moins	less	une livre	a pound
		une douzaine	a dozen
		une tranche	a slice

Elle veut de l'eau.

She wants some water.

Il a des livres.

He has some books.

Je bois du vin.

I am drinking some wine.

But:

Elle veut un peu de l'eau.

She wants a little water.

But:

Il a beaucoup de livres.

He has many books.

But:

Je bois un verre de vin.

I am drinking a glass of wine.

La plupart (most) and bien (many) are exceptions to this rule.

La plupart du temps, je travaille. Most of the time, I work.

Bien des fois, il fait des fautes. Many times, he makes mistakes.

After expressions using de, such as avoir besoin de (to need), se passer de (to get along without), there is no partitive.

J'ai de l'argent. But: J'ai besoin d'argent.
I have some money. I need some money.

Plusieurs (several) and quelques (a few) do not require the partitive. Study the following:

J'ai beaucoup de livres. I have many books.	But:	J'ai plusieurs livres. I have several books.
J'ai assez de livres. I have enough books.	But:	J'ai quelques livres. I have some books.

In expressions of quantity de cannot be used before a pronoun. D'entre is usually used.

Plusieurs d'entre eux Several of them

Quelques-uns d'entre nous Some of us