Mr Hampden says also that Mr Wallace undertook to prove that the further signal was the lowest, or lower than the middle one; and he says that "Mr Wallace has utterly failed to show it, in consequence of the incontrovertibly awkward fact that the more distant signal was higher still." Of course it was. But then the telescope was an inverting one.

Fordingbridge, April 6.

THOMAS WESTLAKE.